PERSONAL DATA PROTECTION (GDPR)

Last updated: 12 November 2026 Version: 2.0 Website: spectline.com

Spectline provides AI-based software for analysing trading history, identifying trading patterns and supporting or automating trading through compatible platforms, including MetaTrader 4 and MetaTrader 5 where the relevant features are available. This notice explains what personal data we process when you visit our website, register for and use an account or the software, contact us or subscribe to updates, why we use the data, how long we retain it and what rights you have under the GDPR.

1. Controller and contact details

The entity identified below is the controller of your personal data and determines the purposes and means of processing. If you have questions about this notice or wish to exercise your data protection rights, contact us using the email address listed below.

• Controller: Spectline

• Country: Slovak Republic

• Contact email: info.spectline@gmail.com

• Website: spectline.com

2. Scope of this notice and data sources

This notice covers personal data processing when you visit our website, create or manage a user account, use Spectline software, use its analytical or automation features, contact us or subscribe to product updates.

We obtain data mainly directly from you when you register, update your account, enter data into the software, contact support or subscribe to updates. Technical and operational records are also generated when you use the website and software. Data from a connected trading platform or broker environment are obtained only to the extent that the particular feature actually makes them available and you have activated or authorised that connection.

3. Categories of personal data

The data processed depend on whether you only visit the website, create an account, use trading and AI features or contact us. We process only data appropriate for the relevant purpose.

• Identification and contact data: first and last name, email address, address and city; depending on what you provide or what is needed for the account, telephone number, company name and website.

• Account and service-use data: account identifier, registration and approval status, account settings, authentication and security records, login history and support requests.

• Trading and market data that you upload, enter or make available through an activated integration: trading and order history, traded instruments, timeframes, entry and exit prices, volumes, Stop Loss, Take Profit, timestamps, trading results and trading account or platform identifiers.

• Strategy and AI-feature data: trading setups, strategy rules and parameters, bot settings, data used for training or backtesting, analytical outputs, identified patterns, statistics, signals and records of software feature execution.

3. Categories of personal data

• Technical and operational data: IP address, device type, operating system, browser, session identifiers, access time, error reports, security and system logs and website usage data.

• Contract, payment and accounting data: orders, billing details, payment history, subscription information and payment-related communications. Payment card details are generally processed by the relevant payment service provider, where one is used.

• Communication and marketing data: messages submitted through the contact form or email, the email address used for product updates and records of granting, changing or withdrawing consent.

4. Purposes and legal bases

We process personal data in accordance with Article 6 GDPR and only for specified purposes. Depending on the circumstances, the purposes and legal bases include:

• Creating and managing an account, verifying users, handling registration and providing access to service features - performance of a contract or steps taken before entering into a contract under Article 6(1)(b) GDPR.

• Providing AI analysis of trading history, identifying patterns, training a strategy for your use, backtesting and providing other software features - performance of a contract under Article 6(1)(b) GDPR.

• Processing orders, subscriptions, payments, invoices and accounting and complying with tax or other statutory duties - performance of a contract and compliance with a legal obligation under Article 6(1)(b) and (c) GDPR.

• Operating, maintaining and troubleshooting the service, securing accounts and systems, preventing fraud and misuse and protecting legal claims - legitimate interests under Article 6(1)(f) GDPR, subject to the required assessment of our interests and your rights.

• Responding to general questions and handling enquiries before a contract is concluded - pre-contractual steps or, depending on the circumstances, our legitimate interest in proper business communications.

• Sending voluntary product updates and using non-essential analytics or marketing cookies - your consent under Article 6(1)(a) GDPR, which you may withdraw at any time.

5. User accounts and software services

When you register for and manage an account, we process the data needed to create the account, communicate with you, manage access rights, carry out any administrator approval of registration, provide customer support and perform our contract. In the current registration process, the required information includes your first name, last name, email address, address, city and authentication details; without mandatory information, we may be unable to create the account or provide the service. Telephone number, company name and website are provided only where the form requires them or you choose to add them. You may choose not to provide fields identified as optional.

We also use account data to store your settings and maintain continuity when you use the software. If you close your account, we will stop or restrict processing according to the relevant purpose, legal obligations, retention rules and the need to protect legal claims.

6. Trading history, AI analysis and automated trading

If you use Spectline trading features, we process your trading history and settings to analyse trading patterns, train or configure a strategy for your use, perform backtesting, evaluate results and provide software outputs. The specific scope depends on the features you activate and the data you enter or make available to the service.

If you activate automated trading and authorise a connection to a compatible platform, the software may, according to your settings, create or transmit trading instructions to the relevant environment. This processing may have financial consequences. Trading history and AI outputs are used to provide the service features; using them for an unrelated or incompatible purpose, or to train a general model outside your account, would require a separately assessed legal basis and appropriate information.

MetaTrader 4, MetaTrader 5 and the broker where you hold a trading account may also process data for their own purposes and under their own privacy notices. Whether and which data are exchanged between Spectline, a platform and a broker depends on the specific technical integration. We do not automatically disclose data to these entities merely because their products are mentioned on our website.

7. Third-party data and safe use

Only enter data into the software that you are entitled to use and disclose. If trading or other uploaded files contain personal data relating to other individuals, you are responsible for having a legal basis to provide them and for meeting the relevant transparency obligations. If Spectline processes personal data of other individuals solely on your instructions as a processor, the terms of that processing will, where required, be set out in a separate agreement under Article 28 GDPR.

Do not send broker account passwords, private keys or other secret authentication information through the contact form or ordinary email. If a particular integration requires an authorisation token or another access credential, its processing must match the technical integration and the security information provided when the integration is activated.

The service is not designed to process special categories of personal data under Article 9 GDPR. Do not upload such data unless a separate legal basis and an agreed procedure are in place.

8. Contact form and enquiries

When you contact us through the form or by email, we process the information you provide, in particular your name, email address, subject and message content. We use it to respond, handle your request and, where relevant, take steps before entering into a contract.

If an enquiry does not result in a contractual relationship, we normally retain the correspondence for no longer than 12 months after the last contact, unless longer retention is necessary to protect legal claims or for another lawful reason.

9. Cookies and technical logs

The website may use technical cookies or similar technologies that are necessary to transmit a communication, ensure security or provide a feature you have expressly requested. We may use such technologies without consent only to the extent permitted by applicable law.

9. Cookies and technical logs

Non-essential analytics, preference and marketing cookies or similar technologies are used only after valid consent has been obtained. You may manage or withdraw consent in the cookie settings, where available, and you can also remove cookies through your browser settings.

During normal operation, technical and security logs are generally retained for no longer than 90 days. Longer retention may be necessary to investigate a security incident, prevent misuse, protect rights or comply with a legal obligation.

10. Newsletter and product updates

If you subscribe to product updates, we use your email address to send information about Spectline updates, features and related announcements. The legal basis is your consent, unless applicable law permits a particular communication on another basis.

You may withdraw consent at any time by using the unsubscribe link in an email or by contacting info.spectline@gmail.com. Withdrawal does not affect the lawfulness of processing before withdrawal. After unsubscribing, we may retain a minimal record of the withdrawal to demonstrate compliance and prevent further messages.

11. Recipients and processors

We do not sell personal data. Where necessary, we may disclose data to recipients or processors who help us operate the website and software, provide communications, payments and support. Suppliers are given access only to the extent needed for their task and subject to appropriate contractual and security measures.

• Hosting, cloud infrastructure, server, database, backup and technical support providers.

• Authentication, user account management, email communication and customer support providers.

• Computing, analytics or AI technology providers, where used to provide software features.

• Banks, payment and invoicing providers, accountants and tax advisers.

• Newsletter, analytics and cookie-consent management providers, where these services are deployed.

• MetaTrader, a broker or another external provider only to the extent that you activate an integration or the transfer is necessary for a feature you request; their own processing is governed by their terms.

• Legal and professional advisers, courts, public authorities or other persons where required by law or necessary to protect rights.

12. Transfers outside the EU/EEA

If one of our suppliers or technical systems processes personal data outside the European Economic Area, we will make the transfer only where the GDPR requirements are met. This may include a transfer to a country covered by a European Commission adequacy decision or the use of appropriate safeguards, such as Standard Contractual Clauses, together with supplementary measures where required.

Information about specific recipients and safeguards may be requested from us, subject to legal restrictions and legitimate security considerations.

13. Data retention

We retain personal data only for as long as necessary for the purpose for which they were collected or for as long as required by law. User account data and trading data needed to operate the service are retained while the account is active and afterwards only for the period needed to close the account, settle outstanding obligations, resolve disputes, protect legal claims or comply with legal duties.

Accounting and tax records are retained for the periods required by law. Enquiries that do not lead to a contract are normally retained for no longer than 12 months after the last contact, and ordinary technical logs for no longer than 90 days, unless longer retention is justified. Backup copies may be removed as part of the regular backup cycle.

When the applicable retention period expires, we delete, anonymise or securely restrict access to the data unless further retention is necessary or required by law.

14. Data subject rights

Subject to the conditions set out in the GDPR, you may request access to your personal data, rectification of inaccurate data or completion of incomplete data, erasure, restriction of processing and data portability. Where processing is based on our legitimate interests, you may object. You may object at any time to processing for direct marketing. Where processing is based on consent, you may withdraw it at any time; withdrawal does not affect the lawfulness of processing carried out before it.

Requests may be sent to info.spectline@gmail.com. We may reasonably verify your identity before handling a request. We will respond within the time limits set by the GDPR. Exercising your rights is free of charge, except where the GDPR permits a reasonable fee or refusal of a manifestly unfounded or excessive request.

15. Profiling and automated processing

Spectline AI features use automated means to analyse trading history and settings in order to identify trading patterns, evaluate strategies and generate outputs for the user. This evaluation may constitute profiling under the GDPR where automated processing is used to evaluate personal aspects of an identifiable individual. At a high level, the system searches for statistical and recurring relationships in the data you make available; results depend on the quality and volume of input data and the software settings.

If you activate automated trading, software outputs may, according to your configuration, result in the creation or transmission of trading instructions. Such instructions may affect trading results and cause financial loss. Spectline does not use this process to determine your legal status or approve your registration; under the current process, user registration is reviewed by an administrator.

Article 22 GDPR applies only where its legal conditions are met, in particular where a decision based solely on automated processing produces legal effects or similarly significantly affects you. If a particular feature involves such processing, you have the rights and safeguards provided by the GDPR, including, where applicable, the right to obtain human intervention, express your point of view and contest the decision.

16. Data security

We use appropriate technical and organisational measures to protect personal data against unauthorised access, loss, alteration, disclosure or other unlawful processing. Depending on the system, measures may include access management, authentication, secure transmission, updates, backups, monitoring and limiting access to persons who need the data for their duties.

16. Data security

No method of transmitting or storing data is completely risk-free. We therefore review security measures as appropriate to the nature, scope, context and purposes of processing and the risks to your rights and freedoms.

17. Complaint to a supervisory authority

If you believe that the processing of your personal data infringes the GDPR or Slovak data protection law, you have the right to lodge a complaint or initiate proceedings with the Office for Personal Data Protection of the Slovak Republic. Information and contact details are available at dataprotection.gov.sk. Where permitted by the GDPR, you may also contact the supervisory authority in the EU Member State of your habitual residence, place of work or the place of the alleged infringement.

18. Changes to this notice

We may update this notice, particularly when Spectline features, processing methods, suppliers or legal requirements change. The current version will be published at spectline.com. If a change is material, we will notify you in a manner appropriate to its significance where required.
